An Intelligent Canine, Which Hunted on Sundays but Tried to Con Here is a tale the truth and accuracy of which I am ready, if need be, to answer for with my life, says a writer in the Boston Post. A certain sportsman once spent three weeks at a certain scacoust town in Massachusetts, and every day except Sunday be went gunning for rail birds with his setter

But Grouse hunted seven days in the week. On Sunday afternoons he would 350 slip off by himself, dodge behind the barn and so out over the marshes. where he usually had fine sport, seldom return 107 ing without five or six birds, all of which he duly deposited in a corner back of the house.

This done, Grouse would come slowly

He Was in No Doubt.

Poots, looking out of the window of his sitting-room, saw a man ascend the steps of his residence whom he didn't wish to receive. To be caudid, he was a bill collector. Calling the servant, he bade him tell the man that he (Poots was not at home. "Itil you tell him I was out?" said Poots. when the servant returned from answering the bell.

"I did, sir."

His master, however, knowing well with whom he had to deal, used to insist upon the production of another bird, and the same performance would be repeated perhaps half a dozen times. Until foully drouge came back empty-handed, or rather empty-monthed, showing that the samply was really exhausted.

I am afrail that this story has not a very good moral, the hero being a Sablath.

"Very life of the window of his the feet with a hypocritical wag of his tail, as much as to say that he had been taking a quet, christian, Kunday afternoon nap.

However, when sharply commanded to go and fetch the game that he had brought home Grouse would slink off, and, couning that his constituted his whole bag, and that he had not killed another one.

Policeman—Wouldn't be no use. He's got a political pull.

Citizen—How do you know?

Policeman—Know it from his looks.

For Men Chiefly. When your collars and cuffs are rough and irritate your flesh, when you find the fine linen eaten away in spots, displaying the coarse filling, this is the cause :- They have been washed with ordinary soap, whose cleansing properties are due to caustic soda and elbow grease; either of these will produce the above, and the starch makes them feel as if you had a saw around your neck.

Pyle's Pearline does away with the rubbing, hence it saves all wear and tear in the wash. It is as harmless as the finest imported castile soap. Linens washed with it are perfectly white and last many times as long as if washed in the old rubbing, twisting, wrecking way. -

Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers are offering imitations which they claim to be Pearline, or " the same as Pearline." It's false—they are not, and besides are dangerous. PEARLINE is never peddled, but sold by all good grocers.
